Subject: Re: Ground loop isolator

Posted by drake on Tue, 03 Oct 2017 14:59:59 GMT

View Forum Message <> Reply to Message

At times I read such vivid explanations and wish I had pursued Physics further. All I can recall is that a good conductor is a substance with 3 or less electrons in its outer orbit. An insulator, on the other hand, normally has difficulty exchanging electrons because it contains 5 to 7 electrons in the outer orbit.