With all the legal issues Facebook has been having lately, I've been considering just giving it up altogether. I don't do a whole lot on there anyway. I mainly just use it to keep up with what's happening in other people's lives. I don't think that's worth letting them have access to so much data about me. Do you think Facebook's spot will be overtaken by another one of the social media platforms out there? Or do you think they'll hold on despite all of this?
