Most of my favorite moments in live music are from more than a couple of decades past, when I took advantage of a unique point of time where I live when blues was riding a wave of popularity. I'll never forget seeing the legend Albert Collins walking atop the bar playing his ax, then getting down and walking outside the venue, playing out in the street. Seeing Stevie Ray Vaughn for a few bucks at a tiny music hole before he was famous. Albert King, BB King, John Lee Hooker, Little Charley and the Night Cats, The Nighthawks and many more. Them's were my club'n day's I say now. Had to endure smoke filled rooms thick as a London fog. Staying up into the we hours, and knocking back a bit too many brews. Pleasant memories now. It'd kill me now doing that stuff.
