Subject: Are NAD amplifiers still something to rave about?

Some years ago NAD (New Acoustic Dimension) were thought to make some of the best amplifiers - certainly for a mid range sort of price. If you were putting together a system with components would you have a NAD amplifier?

I know that since their beginnings in London they have now been bought out and relocated to Canada. Also, they now outsource the manufacture of a lot of their components. Do they still have the reputation they once had?
