I hear you, Bruce. I've always felt the same way.

Stuff that's stored on a cloud server is only as safe as the company that hosts the cloud server.

Of course, it's wise to store stuff offsite too, so it makes a lot of sense to store things both locally and on a cloud server or some other offsite system.

But yeah, I'm totally with you on this. I would never depend solely on cloud storage for anything I cared about.
