Looking forward to seeing you!

I didn't reach out to anyone about seminars this year, nor did I ask for a conference room. I did that the first couple of years in Tulsa, and also early on in Dallas. But after the second or third year, I started making it an every-other-year or every-third-year thing.

You know how it is though: It's not at all unlikely that an impassioned vendor will have what amounts to an impromptu seminar in their room. Keith Larson tends to do that when he comes, because he is an expert in acoustic measurements and that makes his room lively with academic discussions as opposed to listening. Some of the other vendors are like that too. I can definitely see someone get on a roll about multisubs and room acoustics or some other such thing. :)
