I still like physical copies. But for the millinneals, MP3 downloads are the preferred delivery method, I suppose.

I'm actually quite old, sadly. I'm fond of my turntable, vinyl collection, old radio, Walkman, and all that, but physical copies aren't as portable as digital copies and they always cost more. That's okay when I'm buying an album from yesteryear that I already know I'll love, but I rarely like the entire album that a music artist records today. I think things were made better in my day, but I do enjoy the latest tech too.

What do you listen to on your phones? I imagine it's harder to work around the lossy issue without the jack.
