

---

Subject: Re: Self Isolation

Posted by Rusty on Thu, 19 Mar 2020 14:44:48 GMT

View Forum Message <> Reply to Message

---

Well that's been a big part of the problem. Rolling out testing to get ahead of the curve. As Dr. Fauci confirmed in a congressional hearing. Calling it a 'failing'. The administration was in denial for weeks in hopes the markets wouldn't go ballistic. They did anyway. Now the administration is gung ho, over the top. Our health care system operates on a slim margin of supplies and staffing. It can be easily overwhelmed if this crud gets established in the population. So, at least the isolation is the easiest and most effective means to mitigate that. Still, though testing is spotty in this country. It's absurd. The covid 19 is a new, (novel) variant of virus. Other established viruses mutate surely. This one has no immunity yet, save for the people in remission from contracting it. It does seem surreal, the mania that has occurred though. I hope, like the sars virus, this one tamps down soon that life once again renews.

---