It works for me. Must've been being ornery just for you that day. :lol:

Seriously though, there are still lots of little doo-dads, cron jobs and background processes left for me to work through so maybe I was workin' on one right at the time you were logging out. They're just things like automatic backups and other automated support scripts. The basic functionality is done, but some little stuff needs to still be verified.

As an aside, one of my favorite internet eggs on ART is that "you've reached the end of the internet" error message.
