Hi Everyone, I'm with Wayne. I like and use a lot of technology. Some ancient, some new. I shy away from any new "automation" especially stuff that controls things around the house. Too easy to allow someone else to hack some of it. If bad actors can hack major companies that have very high performance security then the only real salvation for us mortals is either not use stuff that can be hacked or accept that our only real protection is that the bad guys are not interested in us personally.
