Subject: Re: Shows that Jumped the Shark
Posted by Rusty on Wed, 16 Dec 2020 15:09:25 GMT
View Forum Message <> Reply to Message

Seems to me quite a few shows follow a pattern of pooping out midway then thankfully, bye bye. Lost was one of the early shows rather like a Russian doll, (Matryoshka), with one plot twist inside another twist that became more and more absurd after the 1st season. X-Files too, another with one conspiracy within another that just got tedious for me.
Some, like the recent Fargo season had sort of an erratic compelling, then, (say what?) episode quality that for me had a letdown ending. That's true in movies too I think. No Country For Old Men was a terrific cat and mouse chase with a ending like an ice cream cone that slips out of your hand and lands in the dirt.