AudioFred is likely a person worth talking to. He's built more speakers than anyone I've ever met and a good number of them were line arrays.

He's on this board every now and again but you might be able to ping him with a personal message. He's a really nice dude and if he doesn't know the answer to your questions he'll likely point you in the right direction.