It was an excellent show. I don't usually like Hallmark dramas because they are so predictable. This one is predictable too, I suppose, but it was still entertaining, Laurence Fishburne was amazing as usual. He made a believable Henry. Plus, it was cool to his kid, Langston Fishburne, play as the younger version of Henry. It was a great film with a nice message. Hallmark doesn't usually go for the inclusivity angle, so that was nice to see as well.
