How was old code written? I mean, was it strictly typed out one character at a time? It would seem an incredibly tedious job. Thus these days are there automated shortcuts in this procedure? It still would seem mind numbing. It must take a certain type of person to do this. Reminds me of a summer job I had at an aftermarket truck light manufacturer. The worst job was sitting at a machine crimping wire leads on to a component. I'd go into a trance almost. Don't know how I kept my fingers from being crimped to the wires.
