Another fine Roku-Youtube find. Here's an interview with Prof. David Harvey on the history of neoliberalism and it's chokehold on the world economies. But shucks, he's an anthropologist. That's alright, most economist are taught to embrace neoliberalism much like how dogs are trained to comply masterfully with humans to be more docile and obedient. As in the prior video with Michael Hudson. A first year econ. student in a phone in Q&A prefaced his question to him perhaps sounding a bit infantile with his question to Mr. Hudson. To which Hudson exclaimed, "No... wait until you've gotten your PHD in orthodox economics, then you'll sound infantile".

Anyway, Mr. Harvey here is very shrewd with his knowledge of the goings on with our deceptive masters of finance. Laying it out with Chris Hedges in two parts.
