I think this guys frustration for the situation at hand now speaks very succinctly in a coarse but effective way to the mess we're in. I feel it's the politicization that erodes not only trust, but accounts for the continued erosion of civil society. This phenomena from nature has not been dealt with in a unified method. That is, putting aside the usual petty motives and theatrical rhetoric and work together to tamp down this dangerous virus. We can't even come to a concession on wearing masks.

Trust is a must.
