One more thing, in addition to less noise in the Telefunken, I detect a small difference between sound level between the right and left channels in the ECC80, and a small difference in the colouration of the background noise - right being a bit 'darker' sounding, the right side being a bit lower in volume that the left side.

I can adjust for this on the preamplifier, but would have expected very similar volume levels.

Can such a difference be understood by some measurement metric that's stated by some sellers of tubes?

Thanks again,

Kasper
