Here's one that just makes the cut for old movies. Made way back in 2000. Memento. The protagonist wakes up to realize he's got tattoo's all over him, that are messages to the mystery why he can't remember his past. From then on the movie moves backward from that point to the reason why he can't remember.

One more called The Witch. About a new world family in early America that gets banished from the safety of the colony where they stake claim to a parcel of land next to a forest that harbors unsavory spirts. The family descends slowly into madness and possession of the malevolent entity. The Director Robert Eggers like Shamalan has a penchant for psychological drama.
