There's still at least a couple movie drive-ins where I live. They supplement income by being swap shops now days.

But I was referring to the old style drive-in restaurants. They were the mecca for kids and cars. Rear ends tipped up with the fat slicks and mag wheels, which were the requirement for any self styled greaser putting on a show in the parking lot. Inching along while the fat rear end tires were scorching the black top.

Sidney's, that was the premier one. Straight outta American Graffiti.
