I'm sure that old Lenin turns in his grave with the way Russia turned 180 from the old Soviet system when it collapsed in the early 90's. He found that representative democracy was just an illusion for the bourgeoisie capitalists control. Which is food for thought. As it was our economic system that rushed in to fill the vacuum then. Russian politics being more extrovert to ours, the oligarch's maintain political patronage openly. Our oligarchy is more subtle at face value.

Hopefully this boiling over of resentment in Ukraine doesn't spill over to a bigger mess. There's quite enough on the plate already to deal with worldwide. Cooperation always seems to be like the little kid in the back seat listening to their parents bicker.
