I don't think so, 'cause Bruce Heran - the company proprietor - is a regular participant of this site. In fact, this is his company support forum, and it's live. So feel free to ask any technical support questions here. He can also be reached privately by PM here or by the email address listed earlier in this thread.

I think Bruce is just having some web content creators doing his site and they're going slower than he had hoped. Maybe they're telling him it's caused by supply chain problems. :lol:

But seriously, Bruce is a great guy and I know he's still going strong 'cause I see him here pretty often. I don't think he's selling stuff right now but I know he is still providing support for existing products. Supply chain problems are still choking everything in audio. I can tell you Eminence has been hit very hard, for example.

I'm sure the OddWatt main website will be back online as soon as possible. If it had tubes, it would be glowing right now. :)
