Hi, Yes there are serious supply/fabrication issues. The actual site has been finished for months...but I see no sense in showing it to the world if we can't supply any products. So we are sort of hibernating right now with hopes that it won't be permanent. I do take support questions here and via PM. If need be because of complexity via personal email on a different account. The actual emails on the previous site do work...but since the site is not there to tell anyone about them there is no traffic except junk promos. I check the support one on occasion and purge the junk. For any of the diy crowd... you can build your own stuff as nearly all the circuits are on a related forum at diyaudioprojects.com. You should read through the individual threads as there are several updates and issues raised and answered. (yes a few are really huge) You can also search for back issues of Audio Express magazine as most are there as well. I regularly contribute articles there. I believe 11 projects to date and two more in the works. All are diy friendly.

Thanks Wayne for the kind thoughts. In these tough times they are really appreciated.
