There have been reports that Eminence hasn't exactly been setting the world on fire in recent years. 'Course that may or may not be true.

Hopefully the new owners don't shut down the Kentucky plant. They claimed they bought Eminence to get that production facility and claim having an American production facility will help their business.

No idea what it means for the current Eminence drivers. You can safely figure the new company will keep producing the stuff that makes them a healthy profit. I'm hoping that the models that Wayne uses in his speakers stick around.
