Yeah, the word "synergies" is always a big winner in conference-call bingo, along with "circle-back" and "value-added."

I just hope they retain the employees and the model line. One place they don't really overlap is the pro-sound market, especially the guitar-amp-speaker niche.

But the place I'm personally most interested in are the drivers that are actually most similar to what B&C already makes, which are high-efficiency general-purpose drivers that can be used for high-fidelity sound reinforcement or for just plain-old high-efficiency hifi loudspeakers.
