Hi, I'm sure it occurs. Fortunately it did not to me. I didn't make it to senior management until I was 63 and company manager at 65. After that I decided I no longer had to work for my lunch and bailed out. Since I am still active in electronics design, audio systems, and even jog 5 times a week I figure I could go back to work if needed. Fat chance though. I have been enjoying doing whatever I wanted to do on any day for the last 13 years. I hope you all have the same experiences.
