Hi, Marantz is still around and have a number of serious pieces of gear. If the player is representative then they should be really good additions to any system. Thanks for the OPPO link. I sent them an email and will wait and see what they say. It decided to not power up most of the time. I studied the guts and it was unclear where the issue was. It could be as simple as the switch...but it is buried in the unit and nearly everything would have to come out. Other thoughts were a power good signal, the residual stand by circuit and so on. It is more like a PC inside and not really serviceable at my level.
