

---

Subject: Re: Modern Monetary Theory
Posted by Rusty on Tue, 30 Jul 2024 16:21:49 GMT
View Forum Message <> Reply to Message

---

Living in these times makes me feel reminiscent of reading the novel 1984 by George Orwell back in high school. The dystopian world depicted in it shows characteristics to what our worlds power struggles are today. Our corporate "Newspeak" that gives a shorthand synopsis of world events that when alternative journalism teases out the jest of their reporting provides clues to what the higher authority has created to propagandized journalism to supplant their policies.

Latest example is shown by Mr. Ben Norton in his Geopolitical Report of the election in Venezuela just recently. Alluding to corruption and voting tampering all over the news outlets. The standing president won re-election, Nicolas Madero, a continuing socialist politician from the prior Hugo Chaves's death in 2013.

The U.S. has attempted since then to undermine Venezuela's government with opposition candidates and sanctioning that has undermined it's oil production, crippling its economy. Many Venezuelans now on our doorstep due to harsh economic conditions brought forth by these sanctions. And Cuba! All 62 years worth.

This is similar to what was read into the election of Vladimir Putin's re-election. Carried throughout the US and G7 countries news media. Though his domestic popularity is enviable to any of our counterparts in the G7 countries can muster. Our sanctioning there didn't cripple their economy. Its more robust and diversified to Venezuela's and Cuba's. Russia's economy is doing well despite sanctioning.

Whom are the virtuous nation's in our world today? It all seems tailored to what the Newspeak media says. Take it with a grain of salt.

Ben Norton:

<https://geopoliticaconomy.com/2024/07/29/us-government-edison-poll-venezuela-election/>