Subject: Re: Modern Monetary Theory
Posted by Rusty on Sun, 11 Aug 2024 14:16:44 GMT
View Forum Message <> Reply to Message

The West, against the rest has been our diplomatic initiative. With us or against us. The U.S. diplomacy mirrors our economic doctrine. Dominance of a small segment of society subjugating the 90 percent of wage earners to service the debt that the entitled small percentage thrives on through Wall Street. 93% of major stock is owned by the top 10% of society.

Our diplomatic corps carries out this doctrine to the rest of the world, expecting to do to the others as we do unto ourselves. But, alas, the BRICS coalition isn't buying that scheme. So we put our pressure on them financially through sanctioning and our Pentagon diplomacy with over 700 military installations throughout the world.
This article from over at the Geopolitical Economic website delves into what a recent retired French diplomat laments about our diplomacy. In effect, our notion of being the sole exceptional and indispensable nation to 'call the shots' in our world. Where international law takes a back seat to our 'rules based' law. Which is a stacked deck in our favor.

Our diplomacy goes so far even to spread discord with the Olympic games this year. Claiming the Chinese have athletes using banned substances to boost their performance. The hypocrisy though is that some of our own athletes show banned substances that the international anti doping commission rules against. But as with other international laws we take issue with, we have our own domestic laws that provides cover for these athletes.

We are being given a load of propaganda in this country towards the real economy that is shrinking from finance capitalism. And presented with a distorted view of what is going on in our world through our corporate media and a maze of political ideological think tanks providing guidelines to our governmental agencies and legislative branch. Whom are funded through the top percentile of our societies wealth.
https://geopoliticaleconomy.com/2024/02/26/western-dominance-ended-eu-josep-borrell/