Played some King Crimson yesterday. From a compilation album bought cheaply. Mainly for the three songs of their debut album in 1968. In the Court of the Crimson King. Used to get some airplay on a radio station in Little Rock Arkansas, KAAY, with a show called Beaker Street with host Clyde Clifford. Real hippy oriented far out man music for the late night tuners in. The song 21 Century Schizoid Man was most popular. That must have foretold what this centuries political dealings would be like. But Clyde would also spin the title of the album too. Which captures for me the myths and legions of King Arthur and his metal clad warriors sitting at the round table. Great music from them hippy dippy days.
