Hi, The above is why with only one exception I use only polys in my gear and specify them in my projects. Any electrolytics are only in power supplies and are bypassed with polys. In one of my latest phono preamps I even use polys in the latter stages of the power supply. So I am in agreement with you. Further if there is a way to eliminate a capacitor in a design (like between stages) I do that as well as long as the omission doesn't cause additional issues.
