Subject: Re: Modern Monetary Theory
Posted by Rusty on Fri, 14 Mar 2025 11:44:55 GMT
View Forum Message <> Reply to Message

Neoliberalism and a healthy population are incompatible. It's true. All countries following the neoliberal doctrine, the G7 are having issues now. Margaret Thatcher's quote from the 80's, "There is no alternative" echo's still throughout these country's as their quality of life is structured by the gulf between those in the top tiers to those floundering heavily towards the bottom.

The main aspect of decline is attributable to the abandonment of industry and manufacturing to the financialization of the economy leading to privatizing key sectors of society once subsidized by government to make the cost of living low to benefit competitiveness of both industry and manufacturing.

Financialization leads to predatory and parasitic economic activity at the expense of the working class. Monopolization erodes innovation and competition.
Society becomes polarized and government reflects that by being ineffective and stuck in stalemate through influences of wealth maintaining the avenues to campaign finance.

This new administration is attempting to forcing other members of the neoliberal collective into abiding to our hegemony of dominance through tariffs while carrying out a continued foreign policy based on creating foes in the world that require the need of controlling through our dollar world currency advantage with sanctioning and through the military complex as the last vestige of heavy industry kept intact. Though the most expensive and recently realized no more effective to other military's in the world.

None of this is effective or beneficial for long term stability. But merely a function of the same outcome with what the neoliberal doctrine has brought forth. The concentration of wealth throughout human history has always led to unrest and dysfunction of societies. It has to be held in check for its unhealthy excesses We all share this world together so we have to cooperate and share resources for the best advantage for all. No one country has a right to determine the outcome of how that can be managed.

https://www.taxresearch.org.uk/Blog/2025/03/12/neoliberalism-and-a-healthy-population-are-incompatible/

https://geopoliticaleconomy.com/2025/03/13/us-top-weapons-exports-china-russia/