That isn't true. Managing a territory where the populous is willing to subvert occupation by guerilla warfare isn't a tactic worth the effort. The eastern "Russian" area is viable. And the ports to the Black Sea. Russia never coveted Ukraine. But push came to shove with US & UK meddling. Russia does not want NATO at their door. Period. And they aren't going to let that happen. Kiev, Europe and the US will just have to accept that.
