Don't you think its time to realize that our political process is and has been BROKEN for some time? Trump is like the pain involved with full blown metastatic cancer disease. He was voted in again despite what he showed of his character from his first administration. Because neither parties potential candidates presented anything but what the stale status quo has been for decades.

He somehow represented a difference to break the political stalemate. But he's ended up doing what they all do from their promises to change things while running for office. Which is maintaining the continuity of failed foreign policy and rewarding the donorship that actually runs our country.

The system is broken brother. If somehow he speeds up the inevitable decline of this Orwellian empire our power elite have created. Then maybe the pain he's inflicting may be worth it. We need an overhaul of our economic doctrine and our campaign financing and lobbying. As is now, our country has become a dangerous broker of chaos in the world.
