I can remember doing well in my first job, but when it came to being sacked, I wasn't told clearly what I did wrong. Since that incident, I don't do anything to impress anyone more than I should because I know it may end up one way or another.

I know that sometimes, we don't get what we want and other times, it worked perfectly the way it will favor us. As for the mindset of what will be will eventually be can't work all the time without our effort. Why you wait for bread from heaven, make sure that you are working effortlessly to get the butter for it.
