That's right. The only one that has been modeled and measured during the design phase is what you show in picture one, the version that conforms to the plans.

I would expect that the second one might be OK but I haven't measured a speaker built that way so I can't say for sure. I would expect the third and fourth pictures to be configurations that wouldn't work as well. I would expect some ripple in the midbass from those because the standing waves along the vertical will line-up differently.
