

---

Subject: Re: Thinking about the Vitus SS-103, is it worth the price?

Posted by Prince on Wed, 14 Jan 2026 06:30:11 GMT

View Forum Message <> Reply to Message

---

What I would say is that the Vitus SS-103 MkII is a good value for the $48k investment for passionate audiophiles like you.

Its top-class A operation delivers a dead-black noise floor, effortless dynamics, silky highs, and heavy, controlled bass that makes music feel vividly alive just like you feel with your Magnepan 20.7s.

A lot of people appreciate Vitus' signature series amps for their grainless fluidity, and ability to unite absolute sound and musicality, which is far better than other brands.

So, I think you are getting a long-term piece that brings a life-like reproduction and I would suggest you make the purchase if the demo gave you such a beautiful experience.

---