It is all about inspiration. Most of these musicians are inspired to make songs at a particular time. Some could be a result of what is happening at that particular time. Others could be just because of some mere situations or economic problems.

I've seen artists who keep recording songs at free time which they get to release at a later date. They could release those songs 4 years after and it is still relevant. So, that is what I think makes a lot of them come up with so many songs.
