And like gofar says, it's been around for some time and is affordable to most people. Streaming maybe the mode of delivery now. But the monopoly of providers may hit a wall of consumer revolt like cable provides did. I get along pretty well with free streaming. I don't have to just have what ever is blockbuster new at any given moment.
But if you want a real theater experience, unless your wealthy and can build your own theater. Go to the cinema.
Certain home theater setups won't need you breaking the bank to do. Many brands have quality accessories, speakers, and receivers at a decent price. This makes it easier for the common man to be able to get going with achieving the aim of having a good HT setup at home without spending more than a thousand bucks.
