To be honest, I find the whole vinyl ritual experience a bit tiring.

I mean, if I need to listen to my favourite song like Hoe to Love by Lil Wayne, I would have to stick around the vinyl record until it gets to the song, right? That's not interesting to me.

I feel streaming is more exciting. I like picking the songs that I wish to listen to in seconds and playing it like I want. That's what I like, and the good part is that I can even listen to a full album from 50, if I want to.

I feel like having that control over what I play is the best, and that is why I am happier with digital records. I am not disputing the fact that vinyl records felt special back in those years and for that generation because my dad still plays those vinyl records when I visit him and enjoys every experience, but a lot has changed and digital is more convenient for me.
