Two things you mention Wayne in your introduction of your electronics fascination. Der Wienerschnitzels, and McGee Radio Electronics. Both which I remember from those days. I never indulged in sampling the menu from your first job. But here in KC was the McGee Radio that I traded in towards the end of its existence.

Both with my crude speaker building beginnings and kit building passion. My Hafler amp and preamp came out of their store. Which was a wonderland to peruse. And their catalogues were loaded with what I dreamed for. Fidelity! They had quite a listing of pro drivers and horns that through you I finally realized that fidelity. I don't know if your local McGee's was an outlet of the one where I live or not. Was it?

Anyway those two links to the past we both share. Wished I'd have kept their catalogues.

Speakers on a beer budget I remember from their catalogue, and, speaker baffles with about 12 or more drivers plastered all over.
