Honestly, I would definitely give this a try! I have always loved the feeling of tuning an old radio and slowly moving the dial until I find a station. For me, the static, whistles, and little bits of noise are part of what makes radio special.

I like the idea of bringing that experience to a phone instead of just tapping a station from a list. I would enjoy turning the dial, hearing the interference, and suddenly catching a clear voice from a station. It would bring back that old-school radio feeling.

I would download it just for the experience, especially if it feels realistic. I would also love to see local stations included. My only question is, would it play real radio stations or just recreate the sound of tuning an old radio?
