I might be the exception here. But the outcome of yesterday's midterm election climax is a welcome relief. Not that I'm hopeful the incoming change of house and senate will bring sweeping change to our dysfunctional political system. But putting a leash around our POTUS with the aid of his cuckolded political party will be reassuring for all the imbecilic initiatives he has introduced.

Poor Elon Musk poured so much pocket change into trying to keep his free lunch government subsidization from being compromised. May it be so. Especially this AI data center garbage.

Will the democratic party concentrate on introducing progressive initiatives that can lead to a lessening of the focus of the outcome of this midterm election? The cost of living. That'll take some kahunas. Like putting a freeze on military spending or conducting hearings on the out of control and degenerate CIA and all its long standing subversive activities in the world over decades.

As I'd emailed a friend. Time will tell.. And feet will smell. Most likely, "Same as it ever was, same as it ever was" from the Talking Heads song, Once in a livetime.
