Subject: REAL car stereo
Posted by DRCope on Tue, 27 Mar 2007 12:45:11 GMT
View Forum Message <> Reply to Message

Sounds OT, I know, but it really isn't. 3 of the 4 Boston Acoustics speakers I had Tweeter put in my '93 Volvo 240 wagon doors when they installed an Alpine head a couple years back disconnected or fell out shortly afterward. (They are now reaping what they've sown in the marketplace, IMHO.)I have a Butler Tube Driver Blue 275 and have been wondering for quite a while how I should integrate the Butler into the picture. Last night I had an audio epiphany: Why don't I build a pair of Pi Studio 1 or 2 (in kicker-shaped boxes for stability), plop 'em in the back of the wagon and drive them with the Butler, completely ignoring the girly-man Boston Acoustics?Has anyone tried this? Any thoughts on the 1 vs. the 2?

Subject: Butler link
Posted by DRCope on Tue, 27 Mar 2007 12:50:21 GMT
View Forum Message <> Reply to Message

Oops, meant to hang this off the end of the above, since most will say, "You have a WHAT amp?"

Butler Tube Driver Blue 275

Subject: Re: REAL car stereo
Posted by Wayne Parham on Tue, 27 Mar 2007 15:16:10 GMT
View Forum Message <> Reply to Message

the back lying face up. I had them built with black formica covering because it's attractive and durable (gets damn hot in the summer sun though). They were held in place with Velcro, which kept them from sliding even under hard cornering. The rear window of a 928 is slanted enough to act as a good reflector. Now the same speakers are in Melissa's 4WD. It's an excellent sounding recommended.

Subject: Re: REAL car stereo
Posted by DRCope on Tue, 27 Mar 2007 16:23:50 GMT
View Forum Message <> Reply to Message

Once upon a time (mid '80's) I had Mission 70's lying on their backs in the rear seat of my Toyota Corolla.For the wagon, I'll probably carpet the parts that show, making them as innocuous as possible, and there won't be a smooth finish to damage when they have to get moved around to make room for big stuff. Velcro's a good idea, too.Would you email the cab plans, please? I'll order up the drivers and xo presently.Man, it's gonna be fun to see you guys in May!

Subject: You've got mail!
Posted by Wayne Parham on Tue, 27 Mar 2007 16:32:20 GMT
View Forum Message <> Reply to Message
