Cool deal, I'll check them out. Have you ever read any of Richard Bach's books? On a lighter (but still pseudo-philosophical) note, how 'bout Douglas Adams?

Richard Bach wrote Johnathan Livingston Seagull and Illusions. Douglas Adams wrote the Hitchhiker's Guide to the Galaxy.

His pseudonym was Richard Bachman (you've got to admit I was close). Nope, never read either author. I guess I'm more into non-fiction, although I did read "The DaVinci Code" and "Angels and Deamons" recently. Not too bad at all, although "The DaVinci Code" was certainly the weaker of the two, by far.
