I found "LAUNCHcast" Internet radio on Yahoo.com, and listening to "Gang of four fans radio" I heard lot of good music I didn't hear for years (Buzzcocks, Television, Devo, Gang of Four, Joy Division...).Not much, but what musical experiences/stories you can expect from PC geeks?

I see the post's you make; I think you may have some good stories to tell, don't be shy, tell those stories. Music is perception created in the mind just like the events of your life. That means the stories are just as important when trying to learn how to make music as the equipment or the software is.The stories help you to learn how to listen and as such they help you to learn how to build and create music making machines.

I was today on cofee break with an old friend of mine (guitarist), he lives in NL now and I see him about once a year. Apart from old odd jokes, we have really nothing to say. Interesting stories? I tried really hard to forget everything about this "...Existence, well what does it matter?I exist on the best terms I can.The past is now part of my future,The present is well out of hand.Heart and soul, one will burn."
