Subject: BTK Killer
Posted by Dean Kukral on Mon, 11 Jul 2005 03:26:02 GMT
View Forum Message <> Reply to Message

You may have seen on the news that Dennis Rader, the BTK ("Bind, Torture, Kill") killer who has brutally murdered ten people in the Wichita area over the last thirty years, has finally been captured.He liked media attention and would send stuff to the local tv stations and paper. (For example his poems and objects taken from the dead people.)He asked the police if it was safe for him to send them a floppy disk with info on it. He said, "be honest." They said "yes" via a classified ad. He sent them a floppy. Under examination of the deleted files area, it was found that the floppy had been used by a local church. Also the name "Dennis" appeared in it. These were the clues that lead to his final capture. He was president of the church (or something).After capture, he suggested to the police lieutenant heading the investigation for many years that they had a good understanding and wanted to know why the police lied. The lieutenant said, "Because you are a serial murderer and we were trying to capture you.

Subject: Good news...
Posted by Damir on Mon, 11 Jul 2005 08:52:24 GMT
View Forum Message <> Reply to Message

...but he was small fish compared to the some "war heroes"... Today is 10 years from Srebrenica tragedy, small town in Bosnia "protected by UN forces". Well, Serbian forces uccupied the city and after that killed 8000 Bosnians. It`s unbelievable what some people are able to to do when you give them gun, knife and matches and NO LAW. However, almost no-one is guilty, of course, except few members of their special forces who are recognized on "funny home videos" they shot during capturing some of the prisoners. Interesting is that some of the killers gave this film to the local video-stores, probably some people found this movie very entertaining and funny. Another "funny" thing is that some of them lived last 10 years in Croatia, like "good neighbors"...