Anyone want to fly a DC9 repaired by guys making 40k? A short course at the local community college and you can make that and not have to work nights weekends and holidays for 25 yrs. So soon when all the mechanics and pilots and maintainence guys are working for nothing and as a result the very less than qualified end up doing this work lets all start piling up those frequent flyer miles in a hurry. And put on your track shoes to dodge those falling objects.
