

---

Subject: Looks Like Fats found his thrill

Posted by Manualblock on Fri, 02 Sep 2005 11:36:51 GMT

View Forum Message <> Reply to Message

---

They rescued Fats Domino from the Flood. Good to see the guy is still around. What should be done about looting? Is it looting if you only take stuff you need to survive? If you grab a TV while you are at it is that crossing the line? If you are carrying only food and water and supplies should you be prosecuted? Should the Police be forced to make a decision regarding what category of spoils you have and how that should impact whether they shoot you or not? I admit; this is a tough one. I say if it's supplies they let you go. But if you are in an electronics boutique; maybe that's too much. But then you make the Police judge and Jury. I still say our National Guard should have been here in force; not the little paltry groups of 10k they use now. That would have solved most of the problem.

---

Subject: Re: Looks Like Fats found his thrill

Posted by Wayne Parham on Fri, 02 Sep 2005 12:08:32 GMT

View Forum Message <> Reply to Message

---

That is a tough issue, isn't it? Seems to me that you can't be seen as guilty for procuring things needed for survival, but then again, everyone is competing for the same resources. Who's to say who gets what? I guess that's the universal challenge, no matter how sophisticated the social system. It's just that anarchy is the lowest level, where pretty much anything goes except what doesn't.

---

Subject: Re: Looks Like Fats found his thrill

Posted by Manualblock on Fri, 02 Sep 2005 13:54:06 GMT

View Forum Message <> Reply to Message

---

Unless of course your dying in which case it's moot. The military needs to get some of those Bell Helicopter UH 1 Iriquois AKA Huey; Evac and Supply vertical flying vehicles back from Iraq to help Americans. Were so concerned and busy about the comfort and safety of Iraqi's right?