The first veto in his administration and he kills the possibility of research that could potentially save or at least mediate the suffering of tens of thousands of Americans. Any one still think this guy is a real American? I find it disgusting.

Yeah, I think he is a real American. He signs the document that don`t allow non-ethical and non-human and non-christian researches, if you like. It is a responsibility from many reasons...the least one - some people can find it disgusting...We can have many types of various researches...and various opinions what`s right and what`s wrong...but somebody must draw the line...and he did it.

Since it's very clear that the vast majority of the American people want to help the sick and dying and as soon as the November elections pass the Congress will write and pass the bill over his veto. So really it is just grandstanding.How anyone could want the living to suffer for a Zygote is beyond my comprehension. Again the fanatics destroy whats right and good to further their little social clubs agenda.

Absolutely; instead of stealing money from the Medicare program and lunch programs for children he should have looked at the interstate highway appropriations bill and the military spending bill and the Iraqi war funding bill; which was supposed to be paid for with the oil revenues instead of their lining the pockets of his oil company friends.
