This link was just posted someplace else. It was in response to a "I thought he was long dead" statement. Me too, but as it turns out The Great One is still at it.Read everything: you'll feel better about life afterward.

I sure wish we'd had the foil, ring or clip yesterday for evaluation at the audio club meeting here in Tulsa. We could have warmed up a couple extra bowls of beans and really enjoyed it.

Hey Funny but I sent away for the free sample foil last year. I still have some. I placed it on the CD label side down as per instructions and listened. I would try it again but the sample is so small and I can't remmember which CD I used it on. I still have a couple of pieces somewhere, it was actually real nice looking. It reminded me of those old fashioned bicycle reflectors, you know, the one's with the multi-colors that stuck to the handlebars. If you want a piece I can send it but it is real small, like the shine'y little photo on your credit card; come to think of it what do they do with those old cards; HMMM. (It's a bargain at 90$ a square inch) is that he might convince you that you do have more hair.I have read of the effects the ravings of this madman have had on otherwise seemingly intelligent people since the 80's.The Stereophile crew first brought him to my attention with their praises for his “special” paper clips and such, and some of those guys actually worked as engineers.I guess it shouldn't be too surprising how susceptible people can be to outrageous claims – look at how many career politicians and televangelists depend on it.

If you wait a couple more weeks I can tell you if it works, right next to my grecian formula.
